Newcastle Disease Control Progresses

Vaccination Now Gives Promise of Real Aid

By W. J. DRYDEN

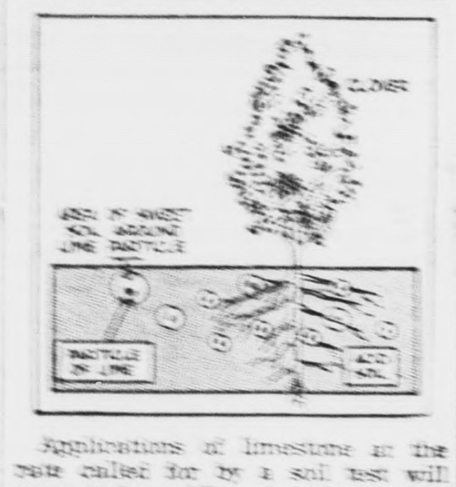
New vaccine developed by the U. S. department of agriculture gives a chicken immunity to Newcastle disease for several months. This is good news to the poultry industry which had cause to fear this new killer. Poultrymen in about 30 states have suffered from costly inroads made by the disease.

The new vaccine is not the last word. Specialists of the various states and federal department of agriculture are still at work to devise a "fool proof" vaccine. The achievement of the federal specialists in developing the vaccine that would last even several months is a big step forward.

Newcastle disease is a virus which attacks chickens of all ages, from baby chicks to laying hens. It also is known to attack pigeons, ducks, turkeys, geese and pheasants.

Until the vaccine has been placed on the market in an improved state, the prevention and spread of the disease must be controlled by sanitary procedures, use of disinfectants, proper feeding, housing and management.

HOW LIMESTONE WORKS



Applications of limestone at the rate called for by a soil test will correct the acidity of surface soils. Lime, however, should be applied from six months to a year before legume seeding to allow time to sweeten the soil.

Disking or harrowing scatters limestone particles through the top two or three inches of surface soils. Then each particle starts correcting acidity in its immediate area. Within a year it may materialize an area of from one-half to an inch in diameter.

In the beginning, acid soil zones considerably outnumber non-acid areas around the limestone particles. However, if sufficient limestone has been applied and thoroughly mixed with the soil and if lime particles are allowed several months to establish areas of sweet soil, clover will be able to secure lime from the sweet areas. Tests should be made before, not after, liming.

New Enzyme May Have Affect Upon All Life

The new enzyme found in the eggs of frogs by University of California scientists, called phosphoprotein phosphatase may have counterpart in all forms of life. This enzyme separates phosphorus from proteins in the frogs, making it available for use by the developing embryo. Phosphorus is essential to the normal growth and development of all living tissue and development of embryo.

Cut Flying Altitude After Freak Death

Navigator Popped From Cabin Drops Four Miles.

NEW YORK.—New safety regulations were ordered for Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., Constellation planes following a strange accident in which a navigator was popped from a pressurized cabin like a cork from a champagne bottle to fall nearly four miles to his death.

TWA ordered that all Constellations using the pressure cabin system remain at altitudes of 12,000 feet or less pending investigation of the accident in which a plane lost its astrodome over the Atlantic ocean.

The airline said it was not known why the astrodome, a synthetic glass bubble on top of the plane behind the pilot's cabin, tore loose.

TWA officials speculated, however, that George E. Hart, the head navigator, might have made a sudden movement while taking observations and struck the glass with his sextant, breaking it.

The plane was cruising at 18,000 feet, while the cabin pressure was that of only 8,400 feet. When the glass broke the sudden rush of air from the cabin pushed Hart through the opening.

TWA said an examination of the astrodome opening showed no damage to any of the metal parts, but that the glass was blown entirely away.

In addition to ordering all its Constellations to avoid high altitudes, the company ordered safety harnesses for all navigators.

It said that in cooperation with Lockheed Aircraft company, makers of the Constellations, it was taking immediate steps to rework the astrodomes and prevent any recurrence of the accident.

None of the 21 passengers or the [illegible] other crew members was injured in the accident, which occurred 400 miles southeast of Gander while the plane was en route to Santa Maria, the Azores, on a New York to Paris flight.

The company said there was no damage to the interior of the plane except for a bulkhead door which was pulled off its hinges and used as a temporary hatch on the astrodome opening.

Stork Almost Visits Old Folks; Got Wrong Number; All's Well

CHICAGO. — The stork almost stopped at an old people's home here.

Nels Pierson, a sailor, and his wife raced into the Home for Aged Jews. "Get my wife to her room," Pierson ordered.

Old folks, seated in the lobby, began to buzz. A clerk explained that young women aren't allowed.

"Isn't this Woodlawn hospital?" the sailor asked.

They told him that the hospital was a block away. By that time the taxi had disappeared. Someone offered the expectant mother a wheel chair.

Her husband wheeled her to the hospital. The stork waited.

Enters Legal Profession by Fraud; Is Given Prison Term

LOS ANGELES.—Charles J. Edwards' career as a lawyer came to an abrupt end.

Edwards, 28, was sentenced to from five to 14 years after pleading guilty to a charge that he forged a letter to the State Bar association in order to enter the legal profession.

On the basis of this letter, Edwards had been admitted to practice in federal courts. He practiced law until the subterfuge was revealed.

Soviet Science Plan Expanded

Russia Making Effort to Get Abreast Other Nations In Research Work.

WASHINGTON. — Details of the effort Russia is making to recover from wartime losses of research institutions and to come abreast of other nations in science are disclosed in official Soviet publications and other papers dealing with the program which have just become available here.

The five-year plan for science contemplates training of 1,230,000 technicians and 700,000 laboratory specialists with scholastic degrees.

A recent "Soviet information bulletin" reported that the Germans destroyed 605 research institutions and stripped others of equipment and libraries. However, actual restoration or reconstruction of a substantial amount of that loss is well under way and the new program is directed primarily at a vast expansion in the whole field of science.

Research directly connected with military subjects, including atomic energy, is only one phase of the program. Research in other subjects is given high priority.

To Speed Up Race.

On the basis of available information, here are some of the phases of the integrated program to accelerate Russia's race in research in addition to training of the scientists:

Establishment of a ministry for precision instrument manufacture.

Special inducements for Soviet scientists, including not only salary factors but extra rations, housing accommodations and other facilities. Cash and honorary awards carrying prestige are added inducements.

Communist party organizations are responsible for seeing that research institutions carry out their work, reporting them when they fail.

The usual Russian demand for production quotas from factories has been modified to allow factories to turn aside from routine production and fulfill promptly orders for research equipment.

Use German Personnel.

The program for establishment of branches of the Russian Academy of Sciences in interior republics, started in 1932, is being extended. Institutions are reported in Latvia and Estonia, as well as the older Soviet republics.

These efforts are in addition to extensive utilization of German personnel and equipment.

A "council for scientific and technical propaganda" has been organized to help disseminate scientific and technical information throughout the whole Soviet economy. Although under the Communist system trade secrets between industries or factories are not possible, the government is reported to have found that circulation of technical improvements and methods was unsatisfactory.

Bicarbonate of Soda Used to Quench Three Kinds of Fires

CHICAGO. — A spectacular new fire extinguisher spraying powdered bicarbonate of soda put out oil, gasoline and acetylene fires at the municipal airport in seconds.

Designed specifically for engine fires, the extinguisher was demonstrated before representatives of the major airlines and army, navy and city fire fighting experts.

Joseph Ziemann, field engineer for Ansul Chemical company, of Marinette, Wis., developer of the extinguisher, said the powder used was first developed in 1921 but "improved tremendously" in the last three years.

After a demonstration in which the powder snuffed out an acetylene flame in a fraction of a second and put out a gasoline fire in five seconds, Ziemann said the powder was just "plain old everyday" soda.

"The bicarbonate is mixed with chemicals to keep it dry and uncaked and that's all there is to it," he said.

Grabs 13,000-Volt Wire, Boy, 9, Lives to Tell About It

BALTIMORE, MD.—Nine-year-old John Floyd had 13,000 volts of electricity pass through his body—more than six times the amount of voltage used to electrocute criminals—but lived to tell how it felt.

The boy underwent treatment at Johns Hopkins hospital for minor burns after he accidentally grabbed a live wire to prevent his falling off a railroad car atop which he had been playing with a chum.

Physicians said John escaped death because he fell at once away from the wire and because the shock was severe enough to "lock" his heart muscles, enabling the heart to resume normal action a moment later.

Assassin Misses Movie Star; Accidentally Kills Woman

MEXICO CITY.—A machine-gun burst killed one person in an attempted assassination of movie star Jorge Velez and his wife, the widow of Communications Minister Maximino Avila Camacho, brother of ex-President Manuel Avila Camacho.

Teresa Bonfigli De Richardi, sister-in-law of the late minister's widow, was killed. Velez and his wife were wounded.
